Letters, Lives & Liberty

Letters, Lives and Liberty opens the new An Post Museum in Dublin's GPO. Situated just off the Public Office, the exhibition explores the influence of the Post Office in Ireland and offers an insight into the role played by Post Office people in the development of Irish society over many years. From stamps and stamp collecting to An Post's copy of the 1916 Proclamation and the little-known story of the staff who were actually in the GPO on Easter Monday, the exhibition is a unique way to learn about the importance of the Post Office in Irish life.

DEAR COLLECTOR...

This is the fourth and final issue of The Collector for 2010 and we've got a real mixed bag of brilliant stories and even better stamps for you.

For instance, page 16 chronicles the story of the world's most expensive stamp, which was purchased at auction in 2005. However, almost as soon as the record fee had been paid, the stamp was given away in a once in a lifetime swap deal! Page 8 tells the story of the role played by two Irishmen in shaping modern-day Chile. A very special stamp, a joint issue with the Chilean Post Office, marks the 200th anniversary of their struggle to gain independence from Spain.

On page 10, you'll find a story about the world's very first Christmas card. They started as one businessman's timesaving way of wishing his customers well and they've been an important part of Christmas (and a good way to collect stamps) ever since.

Ever since 1910, the Automobile Association has been an important part in keeping Irish roads and drivers as safe as possible. Page 6 commemorates their centenary anniversary with a stamp bearing an iconic image of one of its dedicated patrolmen.

Finally, pages 12 to 15 have full details of 2010's Irish and International yearbooks. And you can check out the Last Chance Saloon section on page 18 for a final opportunity to purchase our Fauna & Flora Dragonflies and Christmas 2009 stamp issues. I hope you enjoy the last issue of 2010 and look forward to the first issue of 2011.

WIN A FAMILY PASS TO THE AN POST MUSEUM

The new Philatelic Shop at the GPO is now open along with a Postal Museum showing the history of the Post Office in Ireland. The exhibition at the new museum is entitled 'Letters, Lives and Liberty' and showcases the development of the postal service and its contribution to Irish life and society over the centuries.

The central role played by the GPO and its staff during the events of Easter Monday 1916 is also highlighted. As well as historic philatelic and postal memorabilia, the exhibit includes 'Pepper's Ghost', which re-creates how the events of Easter Monday unfolded through the eyes of the Post Office staff on duty on that historic day.

Stephen Ferguson, Curator of our new postal museum, has given us museum tickets for ten lucky winners. To be in with a chance of winning a family pass to the An Post Museum, simply fill in the entry form below and send it in an envelope to: An Post Museum Competition, Mails Marketing, Ground Floor, GPO, Dublin 1, Ireland.

The closing date for this competition is 1 December 2010.

CENTENARY OF AA IRELAND

“ They created 4,000 warning and directional signs in the first year and did it free of charge in order to show Irish motorists their commitment to them ”

In 1908 the Ford Model T was launched in America. The ‘Tin Lizzie’ marked the shift of car ownership from being solely an option for the privileged elite and more into the world of the common man. By 1910, Ireland had 54,000 miles of road but only 7,870 registered motor vehicles. As this number grew, so did the needs of these new car owners.

The Automobile Association was established in Ireland during a meeting in College Green, Dublin in 1910. The AA quickly established itself as the voice for Irish motorists and their first port of call when they needed help.

The association’s first goal was to create a system of warning and directional signs across the country. They created 4,000 warning and directional signs in the first year and did it free of charge in order to show Irish motorists their commitment to them. As a result, Ireland soon became known as one of the best signposted countries in Europe.

The AA went on to form a working co-operative with the State in the issuing of customs documents and international driving licences. However, it always retained its independence and even fought back against the authorities when motorists’ rights were infringed. This is a trait that has remained to this day with the AA continuing to represent the rights and interests of tax-paying motorists.

The AA also plays an important role in international motoring through close affiliation with the world's motoring clubs. In fact, the AA was a founder member of Alliance Internationale de Tourisme (AIT), whose member clubs represent more than 128 million members worldwide.

Today, Ireland has over 2.2 million vehicles on its roads and the car has become an essential aspect of modern life for almost every Irish family. The AA has become known for its elite rescue service, which attends over 160,000 motoring emergencies every year and has over 600,000 members countrywide.

Created by Q Design, the stamp features a photographic image of a saluting AA patrolman upon a vintage sidecar. The salute was a tradition for almost sixty years, with patrolmen instructed to make the gesture if they saw a motorist sporting the AA's insignia.

IRISH ROLE IN CHILEAN INDEPENDENCE (JOINT ISSUE WITH CHILEAN POST OFFICE)

“ Today there are Chilean villages, National Parks, naval ships and even a research station in Antarctica named in his honour ”

This year marks the 200th anniversary of the commencement of Chile's struggle to gain Independence from Spain. Two Irish men were at the heart of successfully securing it.

Bernardo O'Higgins

Considered one of the founding fathers of Chile, O'Higgins was born the illegitimate son of the Irish-born Governor of Chile, in 1778. After receiving his education in London, he returned to Chile and joined their revolt against the Spanish government in 1810. He was a highly distinguished and brave fighter and rose to become leader of the patriotic forces.

By 1817 O'Higgins had become the first head of an independent Chile. A determined and energetic leader, he built colleges, libraries and hospitals during his six-year reign. He also established the Chilean Military Academy and founded the Chilean Navy.

O'Higgins was finally deposed in 1823 and fled in exile never to return to Chile in his lifetime. He died in 1842 and was initially buried in Peru before his remains were repatriated to Chile in 1869. Today there are Chilean villages, National Parks, naval ships and even a research station in Antarctica named in his honour.

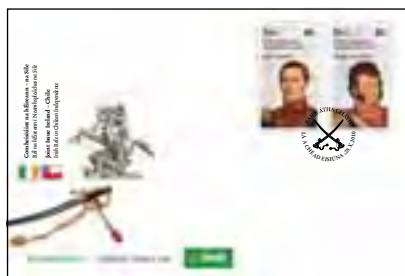

John (Juan) MacKenna

Juan MacKenna was born in Co. Tyrone in 1771.

His uncle took him to Spain to study and he eventually joined their army. He was sent to South America and was named Governor of one of Chile's best known cities, Osorno, where he was given the task of rebuilding it.

In 1809 he moved to Santiago and married a local woman whose family had ties with revolutionaries. When war broke out he joined the rebels and was put in charge of equipping the new Chilean army and trained their first military engineers. He was appointed a key military officer and was eventually appointed Commander-General of the army by Bernardo O'Higgins. As the next in command to O'Higgins, he recorded a famous victory in Membrillor when his men defeated a much larger force.

After a coup d'etat MacKenna was exiled to Argentina in 1814 and died in Buenos Aires after a duel with another military officer.

These two stamps mark the bi-centenary of Chile's Independence. They were created by Ger Garland and contain paintings of each leader in their military dress. This is the first time An Post has undertaken a joint issue with a South American country.

CHRISTMAS 2010

“ One thing has remained steadfast – that sensation you get when the first Christmas card of the year falls through your letterbox ”

They say it's only Christmas when that first Christmas card arrives through your letterbox. Be it a relative, a neighbour or an old friend, you can bet there's always one person who sends theirs first every year. But who was the first of the first and where did the idea of Christmas cards come from?

Sir Henry Cole was a 19th century civil servant and inventor. As well as pioneering innovations in commerce and education, he was also the first director of London's Victoria and Albert Museum. During a particularly busy festive period in 1843, he was unable to find time to write his annual handwritten greetings to his friends and family. He commissioned artist John Callcott Horsley to create a cover for his three panel greeting card.

Horsley created an illustration of a family enjoying a Christmas celebration and placed the now customary greeting “A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year” inside. Talk of Cole's new creation spread like wildfire mainly due to the controversy over the association of a family drinking wine during such a holy occasion.

The idea of sending a Christmas card soon became a popular tradition and spread to America in 1875. After the turn of the century, Christmas cards started to become big business for those who sold them in bulk. Although the sizes, the shapes, the script and the sentiment have changed over the years, one thing has remained steadfast – that sensation you get when the first Christmas card of the year falls through your letterbox, whoever it's from.

To celebrate Christmas this year, An Post has issued three stamps by Steve Simpson that capture some of the different aspects of this special time. Two of these festive stamps feature stained glass windows from Roscommon's

Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help and St. Brigid's Church. The third is a self-adhesive promotional stamp of an illustration by Roger O'Reilly of one of the best-known bird species in Ireland, a European Robin. 55c and 82c gummed stamps are also available in SOAR format.

In this year's Irish Yearbook we celebrate the achievements and talents of six of Ireland's top fashion designers. Whether it's must-have hats, beautiful bags or dresses to die for, we have some of the best designers in the business and we commemorated them with the issue of six stylish stamps. Four stamps were produced in honour of four of the most popular groups of the 60s - The Drifters Showband, The Freshmen, The Miami Showband and The Royal Showband. We commemorated the world's most prominent stamp engraver, Czeslaw Slania

New Orleans—America's THE BEAUTIFUL WORLD OF MR. GROSS

“Gross completed an entire collection of 19th century United States postage stamps. But how he did it is one of the most amazing stories in stamp collecting”

William Hunt Gross is a wealthy American businessman who was born in Ohio in 1944. After graduating from the prestigious Duke University, he went on to serve in the United States Navy. When Gross discovered that he had a talent for risk assessment and calculating odds, he became an extremely successful gambler on the Las Vegas scene. This talent led to him becoming what many see as America's most prominent bond investor.

Bill Gross is one of the richest men in the United States. He has used his considerable wealth to fuel his great passion for philanthropy. In 2005, Gross completed an entire collection of 19th century United States postage stamps. But how he did it is one of the most amazing stories in stamp collecting.

In October 2005, a plate number block of four stamps went under the hammer. These were no ordinary stamps, these were the famous 1918 24-cent U.S. Airmail stamps known as the 'Inverted Jenny'. One of the stamp world's most famous errors, it features an engraving of a Curtiss JN-4 biplane accidentally printed upside-down. Although there are other Inverted Jenny stamps in existence, this particular set was the only one showing a marginal printing plate number, which was also produced upside-down.

POST CARD

M o s t I n t e r e s t i n g C i t y

At auction, Bill Gross purchased the plateblock for a whopping $2.97million. However, as soon as he had gotten his hands on the most sought after stamp in history, he gave it away! One month after buying it, he traded his new 'Inverted Jenny' with Donald Sundman, a famous stamp dealer and president of the Mystic Stamp Company.

In return for the trade, Gross finally got his hands on one of only two USA 1c 'Z-Grill' stamps known to exist. The blue stamp was issued in 1868 and features an image of Benjamin Franklin. It is so called because of the experimental security grill that was pressed into the back, in order to stop it being reused by keeping the cancellation from being washed off. When Sundman originally bought it at auction in 1998, he paid $935,000, a then record price for a single American stamp.

As a result of this extraordinary turn of events and an incredible swap deal between two passionate philanthropists, William Hunt Gross became the owner of the only complete collection of U.S. 19th century stamps.

First Day Cover Collection 2010

This year's collection of our First Day Covers is the perfect way to acquire every Irish Stamps commemorative FDC issued for 2010. Included in this are the Irish Fashion Designers, Legendary Showbands and the 150th anniversary of the birth of Roderic O'Connor. The First Day Cover collection contains 24 commemorative FDC's and includes 3 FDC's with minisheets. Priced at €70 and housed in an attractive presentation box, this collection is a great way to round up the full wealth of covers from 2010.
