DEAR COLLECTOR...

It is officially spring and what better way to welcome in these warmer days and that stretch in the evenings than with a visit to Ireland's National Parks. On page 12, we explore these six areas renowned for their beauty and rare fauna and flora.

We delve into the history of luscious green forests in Ireland on page 8, with a visit to Avondale House and Forest- the former home of Charles Stewart Parnell and the beautifully restored Knockabbey Castle and Gardens in Co. Louth.

On page 6, we celebrate the Centenary of the Irish Amateur Boxing Association and the impact (no pun intended!) it has had on Irish sport at home and abroad since it's foundation in 1911.

Speaking of impact, Amnesty International has been making an impact on human rights abuse cases around the world since 1961. On page 14, we take a look at how much it has achieved in its fifty years of existence. On page 10, to celebrate 2011 being the year of Craft in Ireland, we introduce you to five of Ireland's leading craft designers/makers who have revolutionised the craft industry of Ireland with their works.

Don't forget to check out Last Chance Saloon for the final opportunity to get your hands on stamps such as the Ireland Series - High Crosses, two classic children's tales - The Happy Prince and Gulliver's Travels and the Centenary of the birth of Máirtín Ó Direáin.

I hope you enjoy the spring issue of The Collector.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF THE AMERICAN CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

This stamp highlights the critical role that we are playing in Ireland's economic survival and growth into the future.

The new 55c stamp celebrating the 50th anniversary of the American Chamber of Commerce, Ireland was unveiled by Ireland Chief Executive, Joanne Richardson and An Post CEO Donal Connell at the American Chamber of Commerce's Dublin headquarters in Wilton Place on the 3rd of February.

"This stamp is a fitting tribute to the American Chamber's work as a well-respected, well-informed and vocal representative for U.S. companies based here in Ireland. U.S. companies have contributed significantly to Ireland's economic development over the last five decades. In these difficult economic times, it is up to all of us involved in business to do everything possible to support economic recovery and a return to prosperity here in Ireland, across Europe and the U.S.," acknowledged Donal Connell.

Joanne Richardson welcomed the new stamp saying "it is a tremendous honour that An Post has chosen to celebrate with us, in our Golden Jubilee year, with this special tribute. This stamp is in recognition of the success of our member companies in winning jobs and investment for Ireland and highlights the critical role that we are playing in Ireland's economic survival and growth into the future. Today 600 U.S. companies in Ireland have invested $165 billion and employ over 100,000 people. We are proud to support this positive relationship with the United States and look forward with optimism to the next 50 years."

In January 1961, The American Chamber of Commerce Ireland was established to be the collective voice for U.S. business in Ireland. The Chamber has played host to a number of famous faces, including U.S. State Governors and U.S. President, Ronald Regan.

The new stamp by Dublin's Vermillion Design is available to purchase by calling +353 (1) 705 7400 or by logging onto www.irishstamps.ie

Irish International Coin Fair

The Irish International Coin Fair held on the 19th and 20th of February, was a vibrant mix of not just coins, but all areas of collectables. This two-day event brought together the top Irish and International dealers in Banknotes, Medals, Tokens, Coins, Stamps and post related items. Over 2,000 people attended, many taking advantage of the free valuations given by the top auction houses, with queues forming at some stands and many people expressing delight at values of their collections. A steady footfall ensured brisk business with the Central Bank selling all their stock of the newly issued €10 St. Brendan proof coin. One overseas visitor expressed his delight at the show stating that it appears that the recession is not affecting the collecting world over here.

Celebrating their 50th Birthday, the Numismatic Society welcomed all members and we wish them a very successful Golden Jubilee Year.

In the autumn of 2009, amidst much celebration, Muhammad Ali, a true boxing legend came to Ireland. The man also known as Cassius Clay, arrived in Ennis, County Clare to receive the Freeman of Ennis honour. Ali's great grandfather left Ennis in the 1800's and settled in Kentucky in America. Muhammad Ali only found out about his Irish lineage in 2002.

His visit inspired many young people to start their boxing careers and without associations such as the Irish Amateur Boxing Association to guide them on their way, they would be at a real disadvantage.

To commemorate the centenary of the Irish Amateur Boxing Association, Q Design has designed a special stamp.

EUROPA – FORESTS

“ By 1800 Ireland’s forests had all but disappeared. ”

Ireland’s forests have had a somewhat chequered history. Over 6,000 years ago the whole island was awash with luscious forests and wonderful wildlife. However, in the 16th century, with the development of industrialisation, the plantations of Ireland and a marked increase in the population growth, it began to go into steep decline. So much so, that by 1800, Ireland’s forests had all but disappeared.

A revival in Irish forestation began in 1903 with the start of state forestry, when the Department of Agriculture and Technical Instruction Ireland (DATI) acquired Avondale House and Forest in Co. Wicklow, and established a training centre for forestry there.

Avondale House and Forest is the birthplace and home of Charles Stewart Parnell, one of Ireland’s great political leaders. Set in a magnificent forest park of over 500 acres, there are a number of tree trails and walks. The forest park lies mainly on the west bank of the Avonmore River covering 214 hectares of land. The ruins of Parnell’s old sawmill and Parnell’s well are also located in the park. Thanks to careful restoration, Avondale forest is once more a place to be treasured and enjoyed by many.

Knockabbey Castle, in Co. Louth is another fine example of horticulture in Ireland that has come so far. Currently under major restoration with the aid of the Great Gardens of Ireland Restoration Fund, these special forests and gardens are being re-awoken. The gardens contain some magnificent specimen of trees including the beautiful tulip tree that ranks among the largest and finest in Ireland. There are also some of the finest historical water gardens to be found anywhere in the country, dating back to the 11th century.

Thanks to the time and effort put into restoring these two magnificent natural areas, they can be enjoyed for many generations to come.

To celebrate the beauty of these two scenic treasures, the Design Factory has created two stamps, one depicting the famous Tulip tree in Knockabbey Gardens and the other showing the picturesque River Walk at Avondale Forest Park.

Her artworks can be seen in the Blasket Island Centre in Co. Kerry and the National Botanical Gardens in Dublin.

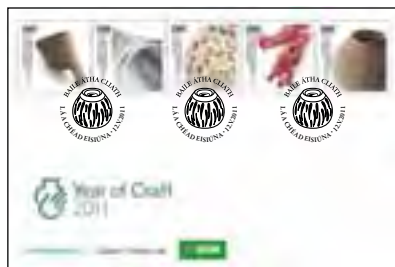

Inga Reed was born in England but grew up in Ireland and has been making jewellery since the late 1970s. Inspired by nature - seashells, unusual stones and leaves from gardens, her jewellery reflects the intertwinement of shape and texture. Her work can be seen at the National Museum of Ireland.

IRELAND'S NATIONAL

“ When the heather is in bloom...a stunning purple blanket spreads across the landscape. ”

Unrivalled in their beauty and home to a range of wonderful wildlife and flora, these are the six National Parks of Ireland.

Glenveagh National Park in Co. Donegal was opened to the public in 1984. Home to fresh water lakes, boglands filled with rare fauna and flora and with a successful re-introduction programme of the once extinct golden eagle, Glenveagh continues to attract visitors from all over the world.

Established in 1998, Ballycroy National Park in Mayo is a vast, unspoilt wilderness dominated by the Nephin Beg mountains and the Owenduff bog, one of the last intact blanket bog systems in Western Europe. It hosts Greenland white-fronted geese, red grouse and otters, amongst others.

Connemara National Park in Galway was opened in 1980. Here you will find some of the Twelve Pins mountain range and when the heather is in bloom alongside the purple moor grass, a stunning purple blanket spreads across the landscape. You might also spot the Connemara pony grazing in perfect contentment.

Park in Co. Clare. Home to a diversity of plants living together within the one ecosystem, there are also species which although rare elsewhere, are abundant here. Strangest of all is that they survive in 1,500 hectares of land that appears to be composed entirely of rock.

Killarney National Park in the heart of Co. Kerry is home to Muckross House, a 19th century mansion. In the park itself, you will find glorious oakwoods and the red deer that are unique to Ireland. In such a magical setting where mountains, lakes, woodlands and waterfalls all converge, Killarney National Park is a true paradise.

The last of the six is the Wicklow Mountains National Park where you'll find Glendalough Valley and the ancient monastic settlement of St. Kevin alongside badgers, minks and many deer, as well as truly stunning flora.

These stamps designed by Steve Simpson celebrate the six National Parks of Ireland in all their natural beauty.

50TH ANNIVERSARY OF AMNESTY INTERNATIONAL

“ Amnesty International has been the driving force behind many high profile campaigns that have made a real difference to people’s lives. ”

Who would have thought that two Portuguese students raising a toast to freedom would have launched an organisation that 50 years on has over 2.8 million supporters and countless successful human rights campaigns to its name.

Yet, that is exactly how Amnesty International, the organisation for human rights came about. In 1961 British lawyer, Peter Benenson wrote an appeal in several international newspapers about these two students who were thrown in jail for raising a toast to freedom. The appeal was a huge success and garnered over 1,000 offers of support.

Since its foundation, Amnesty International has been the driving force behind many high profile campaigns that have made a real difference to people’s lives including the Campaign against Torture, the Stop Violence Against Women campaign and the campaign for a permanent International Criminal Court. All of these have helped to raise awareness around the world of extreme cases of human rights abuse. In 1977, Amnesty International was awarded the Nobel Peace Prize, which it received for contributing to securing the ground for freedom, for justice and for peace in the world.

Image courtesy of Amnesty International. Amnesty International candles at a visit in Dublin in 2009 calling for an end to the fighting in Gaza and southern Israel.

Closer to home, Amnesty International Ireland was founded in 1962 and is the country's largest human rights organisation. There are currently over 15,000 members of Amnesty International Ireland who have fought against the torture of prisoners in Guantanamo jail and against the state sponsored violence in Zimbabwe. Recently they launched a campaign creating awareness over the stigmas attached to mental health illness here in Ireland.

The sole concern of Amnesty International and Amnesty International Ireland is the protection of the fundamental human rights, something that they are doing with great success.

To celebrate the 50th anniversary of Amnesty International, Zinc Design have created this stamp with the iconic Amnesty International symbol of hope - a lit candle wrapped with barbed wire - the wire symbolising human oppression.

THE STAMP THAT ALMOST STARTED A WAR

“Small but mighty - never again would a country underestimate the power of a stamp.”

There is a wavering line that runs in a south-westerly direction from Cape Gracias a Dios on the Caribbean to the Gulf of Fomesca on the Pacific, that divides the two Central American republics of Nicaragua and Honduras.

However, the exact position of this line has been a bone of contention between the two countries for many years. In 1894, the Government of Spain, as coloniser of the two countries, was called in to arbitrate the dispute. In 1906, they awarded a decision in favour of Honduras, which Nicaragua promptly rejected due to “irregularities in procedure.” A conference held in Washington in 1918, proved equally fruitless.

After years of growing tension, things properly came to a head when, in 1937, the Nicaraguan government issued a stamp that depicted ‘the official map’ of Nicaragua. However, the map clearly encroached on what was perceived by the Hondurans as Honduras land.

Honduras promptly demanded the stamp be recalled but Nicaragua refused. They insisted the map was correct and that the stamp would not be withdrawn.

Hondurans were outraged and immediately Nicaraguan residents of Honduras were asked to return home. Government officials began to broadcast bitter speeches calling for the stamp to be recalled and Honduran students issued manifestoes declaring they were ready to die for their country. Within a matter of weeks armed forces were sent by both countries to the area of dispute and the national troops of Nicaragua and Honduras began to prepare for war.

At the last minute, the United States and neighbouring countries Costa Rica and Venezuela intervened to defuse the conflict before it escalated into a full blown war. A peace agreement was signed and both countries agreed to withdraw their armed forces from the area and to cease mobilising their troops. The peace agreement also called for the offending stamps to be withdrawn and destroyed but many remained in circulation until supplies in private hands ran out.

Small but mighty - never again would a country underestimate the power of a stamp.

Letters, Lives & Liberty

Letters, Lives and Liberty opens the new An Post Museum in Dublin's GPO. Situated just off the Public Office, the exhibition explores the influence of the Post Office in Ireland and offers an insight into the role played by Post Office people in the development of Irish society over many years. From stamps and stamp collecting to An Post's copy of the 1916 Proclamation and the little-known story of the staff who were actually in the GPO on Easter Monday, the exhibition is a unique way to learn about the importance of the Post Office in Irish life.
